

LICKING VALLEY COURIER.
Issued Thursday by The Morgan County Publishing Co.
Terms—One Dollar a year in advance.
All communications should be addressed to the Editor.
Entered as second class matter April 7, 1910, at the post-office at West Liberty, Ky., under the Act of March 3, 1879.
H. G. COTTE, Editor.

Hogs and good milch cows are as scarce in these parts as chicken molars.

McCreary's announcement for U. S. Senator is evidently, in cold storage.

Soon it will be time for someone to spring that old "Birthing-ton's wash day" joke on us.

Has anybody noticed the phenomenal growth of the churches in West Liberty since they started the scrap with the Courier two years ago? Nit!

If it is a windy day March 3rd, the crowd of men will line up on the sidewalks of Washington to witness the suffragette parade will outnumber the fair ones who are in the line of march.

Still no disposition of the "city dads" to tell us how the tax-money has been expended. We wonder how long the patience of the taxpayers will endure that none-of-your-damn-business attitude on the part of the board who holds by appointment instead of election.

One of the "City Dads" told us the other day that the town board had nothing to conceal. It's a cinch they have nothing to publish or else they would have taken advantage of the Courier's offer to publish a financial statement of the town free of charge made some weeks ago.

I'll bet a dinner for twelve McCreary men, if that number can be found in Morgan county, that the old war horse don't enter the race for United States Senator. The Governor is nothing if not an astute politician and the hand writing on the wall is too patent for him to fail to see that nothing short of a political revolution can defeat Mr. Beckham for the Senatorial nomination.

The value of shares in the principal express companies have depreciated nearly 25 per cent. since the parcels post law went into effect. But still some of these are selling for about $3.00 to the dollar par value. When Uncle Sam finally gets so that he can handle the business better the prices of express stock will go still lower. It took some practical demonstration like this to show us how much we were being robbed.

What do you think of the oil well at Cannel City? Ain't she a whopper? Biggest thing of its kind in Kentucky, several times over. There is more of the stuff thereabouts or we've missed our guess. Just wait until the hull of old terra firma is punctured south of "Gray Eagle" and see what happens. Oil men will be camping in tents around Cannel City before another full moon.
And development won't stop there either. Wait and see.

WE'LL GLADLY SIGN.

RIGHT, COTTE.—We are with you on your article last week, in which you went after the "dead beats" over the country for doing us poor editors out of our space, and which represents our money. We will sign a contract that we will publish the name and address of every man or set of men who fail to pay their bills at this office within three months, if every other brother editor will do the same, and they you'll see this come to a close, and people will be more prompt in paying their bills.—Morehead Mountaineer.

Glad you've joined us, Fultz.
The Courier some time ago adopted that policy, all by its lonesome, and we're glad to have you with us.

THE FAITH OF NATIONS.

Nations, like individuals, should keep faith with those with whom they make agreements.
The attitude of the United States in regard to the Panama canal tolls is not such as to cause fair minded citizens to be proud of it.
In two treaties with Great Britain the United States agreed to open the canal to shippers of all nations alike. Despite these agreements Uncle Sam proposes to allow American coastwise shippers to use the canal free of toll.
And when Great Britain protests and asks that faith be kept, the United States ignores the protest.
And, assuming the attitude of a bully, it refuses to submit the matter to arbitration.

Nowhere in the Panama canal matter is our hands clean. The concession to build it was obtained by the rape of a defenseless nation, and the purchase of the French rights were attended with charges of graft.

Now, to benefit a few wealthy ship owners, the nation proposes to violate a solemn treaty.

A nation should be a gentleman.

SOUND ARGUMENT.

We commend the following editorial of Ed D. Shinnick, president of the Kentucky Press Association and editor of the Shelby Record, to the consideration of every newspaper publisher in Kentucky. The title of it is "Some Shop Talk," and it is worthy of being mounted and kept standing on every editorial desk as a daily reminder.

Publishing a newspaper is a business proposition. To succeed it must be carried on according to the most approved business methods. With a newspaper space in its columns is a commodity—its only ware for sale.
The public—the advertisers—put no higher valuation on that commodity than the publisher himself does. It is because so many publishers do not set sufficient value upon their space that they fail. A newspaper can have but two sources of revenue—advertising and subscription. The job plant is a separate business and neither its expense nor income should be connected with the business of the newspaper. So, if the publisher places an insignificant value upon his space, the inevitable result is failure.

One of the most common ways of creating the idea that your space is valueless is the constant "free boosts" to individuals and politicians in particular. It is not just to the man who lives by selling goods to require him to pay for every inch of space he uses and give whole columns free to men who make their living by politics. Space is space, and until the publishers realize its value themselves the public will not hold it in very high esteem. To demand a fair price for space and get that price if you sell, is the crying need. It is no cause to reduce your rates because your competitor does; perhaps it is not worth much.
But read the editorial:

"The mission of a properly conducted newspaper is to inform its readers on matters in which they are interested, and in so doing to ever be conscientious and never offensive. Every newspaper has its influences, and its best efforts should be made for the betterment of moral, social, business and political conditions, at home and in the State and Nation. Every editor in Kentucky will agree with us so far, but will all of them concur with us on our views upon the methods the newspapers should adopt in treating candidates for office and political matters generally.

"The constituted authorities have deemed it wise to pass a law making the selection of party candidates necessary through the medium of a State Primary, and the first of these will be held next August. At that time nominations for county and district offices, as well as for a United States Senator, will be made. It will cost those who desire to shy their castors into the political ring nothing to make a try for the nomination. The man who has heretofore been financially unable to pay the entrance fee is now on the same footing with the man with a barrel of money behind him. Anyone may enter any race.

"This is good, and when coupled with the sentiment that grows apace for clean politics and the selection of the best fitted men for the offices to which they aspire, the outlook for better political conditions are indeed excellent. Heretofore the personal popularity and ability to pay campaign expenses has been a considerable asset with many candidates, and because of these officials have been inflicted upon the people who were totally unfitted for the positions to which they were elected. The newspapers, in the past, have contributed not a little by their espousal of the claims of such men, to the conditions that necessarily followed.

"Our intimate association with the newspaper men of the State recently, leads us to believe that the large majority of them feel in this matter as we do: First, that a properly conducted newspaper should not be a tail to the kite of any candidate whose principal claim is his partisanship or his personal popularity to the exclusion of his fitness for the office to which he aspires. Second, that the voters should determine for themselves who are the best equipped candidates, by their knowledge of what the aspirants to office have done or are able to do, and that should come to them, if they are not already possessed of it, through such reputable mediums as articles published by the candidates, or by what they say in the speeches they make. Third, that as the primary is open to everybody, that every candidate should have the same opportunity to 'talk his point' that his competitor has, and on the same terms. Fourth, that in nearly every race there are candidates who are equally reputable and competent and it is unfair to bias the opinions of the voters by defamatory remarks or publications of any man or men who may become the nominees and for whom those of their political affiliations will be in honor bound to vote in the general election.

All in all, it should be the duty of the newspapers to work to the end that a clean election should be held, and that competent men be selected to fill the public offices. The time has passed when "the hustler" who dispenses money and whiskey with a lavish hand, can count confidently upon winning his race. Public opinion has changed, and the opinion of the public is generally for what is right. Merit should win and we believe it will win in the future, for the newspaper men and the public generally have grown wise to the ways of the politicians.

We were much impressed with the truth of the following, which was read out our meeting of the Kentucky Press Association at Louisville last week.

"In the old days it was the proper thing for some small-bore politician, backed by his home paper, to achieve his ambition and then turn his back on the editor, who when the next election rolled around, picked up another with like results, and so on, never seeming to realize that he was being used as a cat-paw to pull the political chestnuts out of the fire. In fact it will hardly be denied that Kentucky editors have brought from obscurity more alleged 'country-savers' and and put them on the political map, with less gratitude in return, than any other class of men in the State.

"Was ever anything truer than this said by anybody, and that does not all of us know that this is an actual statement of fact. We have all torn our linen in the past for men who, when elected, had no appreciation of what we did. We gained nothing from the friendship that was promised and incurred the enmity of those who opposed them.
Let us, therefore, treat all the candidates fairly and let them know that if they desire to gain publicity to their claims that our columns are open to one and all, at the same price per inch or per line, for the space they occupy.
By doing this we will maintain our own respect and the respect of the candidates."

PRESENT DAY EMANCIPATION

The Drudgery of Farm Life a Thing of the Past.

KEEP THE BOYS AT HOME.

Make Them Industrious, Thoughtful and Independent and They Will Want to Stay—The Corn Club is Best Agent in Keeping Them From the City.

Gradually through the onward march of the centuries mankind has learned that slavery, the buying and selling of human beings, doesn't pay. Mankind has learned that no human being develops to its highest and best unless it is free. It must know and feel that it is constructing its own marvelous destiny.

The child doing almost meaningless chores, the boy slaving the hot summer day through for his father, the girl at work in the garden for the benefit of the family, are one and all in a measure enslaved. Of course everything in the child's life cannot be made easy and pleasant, but to force the child to feel that he or she is the physical slave to the family interest must hurt and dwarf its growth.

Go out into the country where the vacations sunshine is making vegetation tremble in its eagerness to grow and chat with some farmer's son, a little fellow still in the grades. If you should ask him about the future he is almost sure to say enthusiastically, "I'm going to town to work the very first chance I get. I'm three-dead tired—of the farm all right."

Why does he say it? Why does he believe he will be happier in the city than in the country? He says it and believes it because he has never got anything more than his "board in" keep out of all the early rising and hard work he has known.

Wherever the boy has had an opportunity to grow a crop of his very own he has shown that he is industrious, plucky, thoughtful and mentally alert. Under such conditions he is a free man, working out his own prob-

AN EMANCIPATED BOY.

lem, earning his own money and growing mentally, as any free agent must.
This is not a fancy or the spin theory trying to set aside the accumulated wisdom that the ages have striven to give us in the rearing of the youth of our land. It is the experience that a few short years in the Boys' Corn clubs has given us. It has shown us that boys, mere lads of ten years, who have worked tirelessly for their fathers in fields that produced at best forty or fifty bushels of corn to the acre, can be transformed into wide awake youngsters producing from 50 to 100 bushels of good corn to the acre.

Let the children be freed, not because their labors have been too heavy, but that they may find themselves in a larger and finer manhood and womanhood, that will make our country life into something better than it ever has been in the past.

Breeding Tells.

An expert in corn judging was looking over a county exhibit to select the best ten ears. He had inspected the display carefully twice, when he hesi-tated and looked puzzled. He started to speak, but stopped and examined critically two piles of ten ears each which were merely known to him by their tag numbers. At last he touched the two piles and said: "I am going to hazard an opinion. These two piles of corn are Johnson county white, and they have been grown from the same lot of seed corn."

Again he inspected the corn in both piles, while the few people in the room watched him with increasing interest.
He smiled as he again began to speak.
"Yes," he said, "I am absolutely certain of my first two statements, and I am going to make a third. The seed corn from which both of these exhibits were grown was not brought from a distance, but was selected and grown by an expert somewhere in their neighborhood."

Several of the bystanders laughed at such a sweeping statement. When the prizes had been awarded and the notebook which held the names and numbers of the exhibits had been consulted it was found that the corn had been grown by brothers. The seed had been grown by their father, who had been a student of seed corn for eight or ten years.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy
Cures Colds, Croup and Whooping Cough

Heart Disease Almost Fatal to Young Girl

"My daughter, when thirteen years old, was stricken with heart trouble.
She was so bad we had to place her bed near a window so she could get her breath. One doctor said, 'Poor child, she is likely to fall dead any time.' A friend told me Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy had cured her father, so I tried it, and she began to improve. She took a great many bottles, but she is spared to me today, a fat, rosy cheeked girl. No one can imagine the confidence I have in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy." A. R. CANON, Worth, Mo.

The unbounded confidence Mr.
Canon has in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is shared by thousands of others who know its value from experience. Many heart disorders yield to treatment, if the treatment is right. If you are bothered with short breath, fainting spells, swelling of feet or ankles, pains about the heart and shoulder blades, palpitation, weak and hungry spells, you should begin using Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy at once. Profit by the experience of others while you may.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

GUMPTION
Which is Common Sense without Educational Furberelows.
BY L. T. HOVERMALE.

The March of Progress.
Shortly after the adoption of the amendments to the constitution of Ohio this column predicted that under the rights given by them the people would use the Initiative and Referendum to regain the rights that had been taken from them and given to corporations. Just now we are having that prediction verified. To avoid a submission of a question to the people one corporation has surrendered and is begging for its existence. Keep your eyes on Ohio. It is blazing a path that all the States will eventually follow.

The Cincinnati Traction Company has a fifty year franchise in that city, and in keeping with the policies of most corporations it assumed "the-public-be-damned" attitude. But Cincinnatians realized the power the recent amendments gave them, and Representative Biglow introduced a bill in the legislature revoking the franchise. Under the new rule, whether the bill passed the legislature or not, the people could demand a referendum on it and revoke the franchise by popular vote. Hence the Traction people's surrender. They offer to surrender the fifty year franchise and accept an indeterminate one, giving the city the right to take over the property at will.

The public discussion of the matter has given Cincinnatians some new ideas in the matter and it is only a matter of a short time until the city will take over the street railway and run it for the benefit of the people. That city will be the pioneer of our larger cities in the acquiring and operating the public utilities. It will lead in the movement that will take from private ownership the utilities that are public in their nature. The time is at hand when national, state and municipal governments must take over and operate for the benefit of the people all means transportation.

European cities long ago learned that street railways, light plants, water works, etc., were properly the functions of the municipalities, and they run them for the benefit of the people, giving better service, cheaper rates and use the income to defray the city expenses. The adoption of the Initiative and Referendum will put the power to do these things in the hands of the people, and in less than two decades the American cities will be operating and owning the street railways, lighting and heating plants, waterworks and all of the utilities that are by their nature public utilities.

And it will grow and spread. The one month's experience with the parcels post has opened the eyes of the people to the gigantic extortion that has been practiced by the express companies, and they will naturally learn that the railroads are doing the same thing to them in freight rates, and soon such a howl will go up that the National government will have to take over the railroads, telegraphs and telephones and operate them for the people. These things are just as much public service functions as the mail service and the public schools, and the people will not long permit them to remain in the control of private individuals.

With the public ownership of the means of transportation will come the greatest development of the country that has ever been known. Railroads, under private ownership, are not built to benefit the people, and much of the country is kept undeveloped until such time as it suits capital. Under public ownership railroads would be built to all parts of the country, and under one system the operating expenses would be reduced and we would have better service and lower rates. And while some parts of the system, in themselves, might not be profitable, the system as a whole would be. But profit would not be the object under public ownership. It would be to give to all parts of the country a ready means of transportation, lower freight and passenger rates. There would be no watered stock to declare dividends upon, and the increased amount of shipping that would result from lower rates and better facilities the

ARGUMENT NEEDED TO BACK UP ADS

Clear and Concise Reasons Necessary to Give Force to Publicity.

By J. M. SCHLITZ.
The argument in an advertisement is a subject that covers a broad field in the advertising world, and is the cause of considerable difference of opinion, even among the best known advertising men in the country. There are no two competing firms that will advertise exactly from the same angle, or viewpoint.

All advertisers strive to give reasons, and produce evidence as to why their particular piece of merchandise is superior to any other like product. By explaining their own peculiar and superior methods of manufacture, advantageous position for making prompt deliveries, or their unequalled purchasing power of the raw material.

In the first place, it is necessary that the advertiser place himself in the other man's position, as well as looking at the proposition from his own side, in order to be able to strengthen his own argument, by over-coming the argument that the prospective purchaser is likely to meet him with. In his own mind, while reading the advertisement. This is an important matter in advertising, and I believe that the reason so many advertisers fail to secure the expected results, is largely from the fact that many simply see the proposition from their own point of view, being entirely oblivious of just how it will appear to the other man, or the majority of prospective purchasers. In selling a man merchandise, whether it be for his pleasure or profit, we must mold his mind to four different attitudes, before we can secure his name to the order. First, his attention. This is comparatively easy for the personal salesman, but, to get back to the subject, when we have his attention, it is then necessary that we excite his interest, which is a little easier, if we have something in which he is interested. Then, it is necessary to create in him a desire to have by showing him the many improvements and benefits that he will derive, and lastly, induce in him the determination to buy.

Two Ultimate Results.
An advertisement intended to secure direct results or sales, must have a proposition which should have in view two ultimate results; it must either induce the expenditure of money, or induce the exercise of a choice. In the first place, supposing the advertised article is merely an improvement over the usual type of an article in general use by a certain class of users, which gives satisfactory results, and which is generally considered as meeting the requirements of that class of users. Here it is necessary to produce such argument as will induce the purchaser to discard the present article and decide on the other expenditure of money, which he had not intended to spend. In order to do this, it is necessary to give specific reasons, showing why and how the article would make a saving, by discarding the one already in use, and putting in the new.

This cannot be accomplished by simply dealing in generalizations or for instance saying: "Our machine will save you $100 a month. It is far ahead of the machine you now have." It must be explained just how this saving is accomplished and whether or not it will economize in material, labor or whatever the case may be and in such a way that the prospective purchaser may grasp it without requiring considerable study on his part.

Where it is necessary to induce the exercise of a choice, it is a different proposition, for this is a case where the man intends to spend the money, perhaps for the same article, but instead of spending it for the article for which he intended to spend it, he is induced to make a change and buy something different. In this, the advertiser would argue or reason why this change would be a benefit to the purchaser. It will depend altogether on the reasons and the way these reasons are placed before him, that will induce him to make that change.

Must Give Reasons.
The average man in business thinks he is getting along well enough with his present appliances, until such convincing argument is brought before him as will show him why it is necessary to make an expenditure of money on which he had not counted. In this, the advertiser is simply dealing in generalities without any particular proposition in view, will not accomplish the desired results. Copy that betrays results must have argument that convinces by giving clear, concise, definite reasons, showing the where and the how of the proposition. It is argument that produces results, that counts. Simply coming out in an advertisement and saying: "I make the best hats in the world," reveals would aid materially in defraying the general expenses of the government, reduce the necessity for a tariff and greatly lower the cost of living.

Public ownership of public utilities is the next great step forward in the march of progress, and it is at hand.

WINDOW SHOULD BE TRIMMED OFTEN

By A. E. EDGAR.

How many people pass your store in a day? If the average is ten a minute in the eight busiest hours of the day 4,800 people must pass your window. This number, 4,800, represents what, in newspaper parlance, is called daily circulation.

A good advertiser will change his advertisement in his local paper often, and for a similar reason the advertiser should change his window trim frequently. This is an easy matter for almost any store. It is not necessary that every elaborate detail be changed two or three times a week, but it is worth while changing some portion of it. The up-to-date window is trimmed on a unit idea, except when some one line of goods is featured exclusively. It should be an easy matter to remove one or more of the central units and replace them with others. When this is done the background and display remains in place for a week or so, while the central portion, or foreground, is frequently changed.

Price Cards Profitable.
There is not the slightest doubt that judicious use of price tickets and window cards will pay well for their cost and the time expended in their making. It has been proven, also, that a window card is much more valuable than one that is glaring and sprawlingly "artistic." The window card is a small thing in itself, so is the newspaper advertisement. As the latter is an important link in the chain of publicity so should the window card be a thing of sense and meaning. Such expressions as, "We'll treat you right," "We sell at lowest prices," "We have the largest stock in town," while of some value are not nearly so desirable as some definite information or suggestion about some line or article on display.

It is safe to say that the messages sent out constantly through this medium are bearing fruit every day. A card that is suggestive will always be sure of having people who read it think and ponder over the inducements offered. The good work these cards do may not always be easily traced, but they have done good for others and to all classes of stores.

A clothier and haberdasher of Chicago has stated that window cards made out of plain wrapping paper, with a carpenter's blue pencil, were the means of building up a successful business for him.

The price card is a salesman. When a man looks in a show window and notices a saw he likes he wonders first of all what the price is. He feels diffident about asking a salesman what the price may be, so passes on. If the question of "how much" is answered so often as possible by price cards, more sales will be the result.

LAZY FELLOW IN DEMAND

Gets Dozen Replies to Ad., But Shows True Colors in "Turning Down" All of Them.

"Lazy, dull, non-ambitious young man, with a high school education, wants work of some kind; has had two years' experience in a drug store; also taught school," is a North carolina Tribune.

The efficacy of this modest ad. which appeared in the classified columns of the Minneapolis (Minn.) Tribune recently, was evidenced in a dozen offers of good jobs, but apparently not to the taste of the advertiser, who "turned them all down."

Twice he was asked to take work as a stenographer, and was even offered a job as a school teacher, in which profession he already has "starred," having taught rural school, according to the "ad." His reasons for not accepting these offers were that he was looking for "something intellectual" and feels that he is best fitted for "higher" kind of work.

It was stated on his behalf that he was thinking seriously of entering the University of Minnesota, and for that reason might not consider jobs of even "intellectual" work unless they were specially tempting and came very soon.

Some Don't's.

- Don't speak ill of a competitor.
- Don't advertise in a perfunctory manner.
- Don't forget that, as the seasons change, the wants of the public change; and arrange samples and windows accordingly.
- Don't snub the traveling man; you may want a favor at his hands some day.
- Don't expect to do all of the business done in your line, nor claim that you do it all.
- Don't get the idea that dust and dirt will be overlooked in your place.
- Don't be "penny wise and pound foolish" in the matter of tools and appliances to work with.
- Don't have too many prices; the adoption of this rule will save you considerable annoyance and promote confidence in the justness of your prices.
- Don't leave your store in charge of one who has not a practical knowledge of the goods; any customer wants and expects intelligent attention.

San Jose Scale In Kentucky.

A great many of the orchards of Kentucky are badly infested with San Jose scale, becoming so common that it threatens to wipe out a great many of the orchards altogether unless strenuous measures are taken to control it. At this particular season it is well to call the attention of the orchard owners to the pest, so that steps may be taken to hold it in check.

The San Jose scale belongs to a class of insects known as sucking insects. It attacks nearly all fruits and is oftentimes found on scrub and forest trees. On badly infested limbs it appears as a greyish scurf which is made up of millions of insects. The individual scale is round and somewhat smaller than a pin head. On the fruit the scale makes itself known by the characteristic little red blotches. The scale usually attacks the younger wood first, and if left undisturbed soon covers the whole tree. One of the best places to look for it is at the point where new wood growth started the previous season.

Since the scale is a sucking insect and obtains its food from beneath the surface of the plant host it is obvious that no spraying with Paris green or other arsenical preparation would kill it. Hence some one of the contact sprays which kill from the outside must be used. The contact sprays are caustic and penetrating in their effect and are generally used for scale insects.

Some of the most important contact sprays are Lime and Sulphur Wash Soap Solutions, Kerosene Emulsion, Tobacco, Extract Soluble Oils and Lye Wash.

Lime and Sulphur is the most common insecticide used. For San Jose scale it should be applied while the trees are dormant. Spray as late as possible before the buds start to swell. Lime and Sulphur for dormant trees is usually prepared as follows:

Fresh Lime (unslacked) 20 lbs.
Sulphur 15 lbs.
Water 50 gals

Prepare the above by slacking the lime and sulphur together in a large iron kettle, dilute to 15 gals. and boil for forty-five to sixty minutes. The liquid if properly prepared will turn to a reddish amber color and will be ready for use. Dilute to fifty gallons and apply as soon as possible because it loses strength on standing.

If one has a small orchard and does not care to prepare the lime and sulphur at home, it may be purchased at reasonable rates from the larger implement and supply stores. A great many of the commercial growers no longer prepare their own mixture, but use the commercial mixture instead. It should be applied as follows:

Concentrated material 1 gal.
Water 9 or 10 gals.

The above formulas give the strengths recommended for dormant sprayings only. Remember that thoroughness is necessary in order to obtain results from spraying. Use a strong durable, brass-lined pump that will carry a good strong steady pressure. To be successful the work must be well done. This means that every limb on the tree, from the ground to the tip, is to be covered with the spray.

For further information along this or allied lines of orchard management, address the Department of Horticulture, Kentucky, Experiment Station, Lexington, Ky.

J. H. CARMODY,
Assistant Horticulturist.

The O'possum Heap.

The best compost heap is the manure of horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and fowls. All such should be saved. The leaves of trees that can be gathered in any quantity during winter and spring are very valuable. Rich muck in low wet places is very valuable and a great fertilizer—in fact, any decaying matter. These things can be gathered in immense quantities on any farm, and in them you have a basis for a fertilizer that will make your farm and yourself rich. Gather all these things that I have mentioned at every spare time you have during the year; in fact, make it a part of your regular work, and mix them in a heap as a basis for your fertilizer. Save all your ashes; burn brush, old logs, corn stalks, trash, anything that will make ashes, and save the ashes in a dry place. They are worth their weight in silver as a fertilizer.

When you desire to make a batch of fertilizer, make a pen—any size you choose—of rails or poles, under a shed and put in the bottom about three inches deep of the manure, leaves, muck, cotton-seed, etc., until you have piled up, say, twenty-five bushels. Then sprinkle on the top of that one bushel of the salt-petre mixture. Then sprinkle the bed with a strong solution of potash or lye, then twelve bushels of ashes and lime, or ashes alone if you have no lime; then twenty-five bushels of manure, then one bushel of the salt-petre mixture, then sprinkle the bed with the solution of potash or lye, then twelve bushels of ashes and lime, and repeat the layers in the same order as high as you choose, always finishing with a layer of manure, leaves and muck. Be sure to have the heap moderately wet with the solution of potash or lye. It will be ready for use in from three to six weeks, and when used it should be cut down perpendicularly with a sharp shovel or spade. Use from two to four hundred pounds per acre according to soil.—James B. Richey, in Home and Farm.
